The mission of the English Department is to facilitate an exemplary education in the liberal arts by training students to read, write, and think critically about texts in a variety of modes and genres. The English program provides developmental and college-level composition course sequences, General Education Program offerings, a major program with concentrations in Creative Writing, Literature, and Literature and Writing (designed for students seeking teaching certifications), and a Minor program with Creative Writing and Literature options. The department prepares a diverse student population for success in college coursework, future careers, and roles as public and private citizens. In addition, the major concentrations provide specialized preparation for entry into graduate school, as well as for careers in education and fields related to creative writing.

The English Department faculty is actively involved in scholarly research and publication, and the creative work of the faculty includes poetry, prose fiction and nonfiction, essays, and journalism. Each year, the English Department publishes Paths, a student journal of creative writing. In addition, students publish their expository work in Explorations: A Journey in Expository Writing. Each spring, the Department celebrates Shakespeare with its "New Jersey Shakespeare Scene Festival," based on the Folger Shakespeare model that has been in existence for more than 25 years. The Department also sponsors a chapter of Sigma Tau Delta, the International English Honors Society.

Students who enjoy reading and writing about literature and/or writing creatively are excellent candidates for the English Major. The English Department offers a rich variety of courses, from which are shaped three concentrations: Creative Writing, Literature, and Combined Literature and Writing. The requirement for admission to all concentrations is a cumulative grade point average (CGPA) of 2.0 in General Education Program courses. Only courses in which grades of "C" or higher are earned are applied to the major requirements. Students are assigned to an English faculty advisor as soon as they declare a major in English.

The NJCU English Department sponsors a chapter of Sigma Tau Delta, the International English Honor Society.

Notes:

1. Successful completion of ENGL 102 is required to enroll in all English courses numbered 200 and higher.
2. English majors in all concentrations must complete ENGL 213 within the first nine credits in the major, and must enroll in ENGL 412 in their final year of classes.
3. Only courses in which grades of C or higher are earned will be applied to the major.

The course reinforces college level writing skills introduced but not yet mastered in previous composition classes.

ENGL 99 Independent Study In College Writing (3 Credits)
This course, required of all students, is an introduction to the basic communicative skills needed in college—reading, writing, speaking, and listening—through the interpretation of textual, visual, and digital materials. It also provides an introduction to research skills.

ENGL 100 English Composition I II (4 Credits)
This course, required of all students, continues to develop the skills practiced in ENGL 101. Students learn to identify and to write critically about literary forms including fiction and nonfiction, and they learn how to conduct research and write a research paper.

ENGL 102 English Composition II (4 Credits)
This course, required of all students, continues to develop the skills practiced in ENGL 101. Students learn to identify and to write critically about literary forms including fiction and nonfiction, and they learn how to conduct research and write a research paper.

ENGL 108 Advanced Essay Writing (3 Credits)
This is one of the classes that the English department offers on experimental writing. This is just one workshop in a series of writing courses. Enrollment for this course is limited to 15 students.

ENGL 125 Stories of the University (3 Credits)
How did universities begin? How have they evolved? Who benefits from university, and who pays? What explains the peculiar traditions, status, and structure of universities? And how will they change in the future? Students will explore the history, culture, and politics of higher education through fiction, essays, and other texts.

ENGL 130 Reading the Environment: Ecotexts and the Global Local (3 Credits)
Students will read ecotexts (texts from environmental literature and ecological criticism) to explore the history, politics, economics, science, ethics, and spirituality of humanity’s relationship with the natural world; they will develop reading, writing, and critical thinking skills through personally and socially relevant inquiry into representations of the environment.
ENGL 133 Dark Stories for Young Adults (3 Credits)
In this course, students will analyze dystopian literature for young adults. These dark and edgy works explore repressive societies and contemporary challenges like environmental disasters, technological dependency, bioengineering catastrophes, and social inequality. Students will use these texts to cultivate their own ideas about social change and responsible citizenship.

ENGL 135 Old and New Worlds: Place in US Immigrant Literature (3 Credits)
This course examines geographies of immigration through an analysis of the trajectory of the immigrant journey-departure, arrival, settlement, and literal and imaginary return. Exploring cross-generational ideas of "home" enacted by immigrant texts, it considers "place" as a locus of memory in connection to social and historical issues and events.

ENGL 147 Effective Speaking (3 Credits)
This is a study of the elements of effective speaking: the preparation, delivery, and evaluation of oral communication. The enrollment for this class is limited to 15 students.

ENGL 150 From Game Playing to Creative Writing: Literary Games and Formal Experiments in Creative Writing. (3 Credits)
Students compose original works by experimenting with language’s visual and sonic qualities, modifying literary and non-literary forms (e.g. sonnet, cookbook, grocery list), and utilizing non-traditional compositional techniques: cut-up, content scraping, n+1 aggregation. Because experimental writing often adheres to rules/formal procedures, students adopt rule-bound, constraint-driven forms that share an affinity with literature and gaming.
