The Center for Teacher Preparation and Partnerships (CTPP) serves as a liaison between the New Jersey City University College of Education and the education community. The CTPP is a student service office, which supports all aspects of clinical practice, primarily by establishing and cultivating P-12 school partnerships.

Students inquiring about clinical practice are invited to contact the CTPP or visit the appropriate academic department.

The CTPP works collaboratively with various departments to:

1. Place approved teacher candidates into clinical practice placements;
2. Coordinate collaboration between the university, public schools, and other education stakeholders;
3. Support educational partnerships with community colleges, partner schools, and school districts;
4. Coordinate the teacher performance assessment; and
5. Process teacher certification applications.

CTPP guidance and resources are readily available online on the CTPP website (<https://www.njcu.edu/academics/schools-colleges/deborah-cannon-partridge-wolfe-college-education/center-teacher-preparation-and-partnerships/>).
